To whom it may concern:

Letter of recommendation for Louis Hervet

I worked with Louis in the second half of his six-month consulting internship at Analysys Mason in Sweden, and am writing to commend Louis for his dedication and contribution to the project. Louis has a keen and enquiring mind, and given his strong work ethic and adaptable nature, would be an asset to any employer or endeavor that he sets his sights on.

Louis was part of the core team of a transaction-related consulting project that I was managing in late 2024, and was involved from the kickoff meeting, all the way to the presentation of the final deliverable to the client. The project was for an infrastructure-focused investment fund that was considering an investment into an internet-of-things (IoT) platform with operations in several countries within and beyond Europe.

During the project, Louis contributed to various forms of research and analysis within the management consulting toolkit, including market sizing and forecasting, competition landscape scanning and value proposition benchmarking. He also gained proficiency in using tools such as Excel, PowerPoint, and ThinkCell to produce client-ready output. The skills that he gained on this project, in research, analysis, writing, and personal organisation, will no doubt help him in future endeavors.

My understanding from colleagues is that Louis was equally engaged in other contributions that he had made over the course of his six-month internship, including contributing to proposal and pitch writing, and conducting research to support meetings with management committees and institutional investors. Louis was also particularly active in contributing to sustainability-related projects and deliverables, including a report on Nature-Based Interventions, an article on Smart Agriculture, a benchmark on European sustainability hackathons, and study visits to Finland and Denmark on gender equality in the digital bioeconomy.

Just as importantly - I found Louis to be easy to work with, and someone who made a highly positive contribution to team morale. With his versatility and commitment to producing good work, I very much look forward to seeing how he develops in his career, and believe that any future employer or collaborator would be lucky to have him.

Yours sincerely,
